Massachusetts State Republican Convention.

Worcester, Mass., Sept. 20 .- The Republican State Convention met here to day. The committee on pers manent organization unanimously reported the name of Senator, G F Hoar for president with the usual distribution of officers. On the announcement of Mr. Hoar's name there was considerable applause and "He voted for the River and Harbor bill," and then followed a scence of some confusion and excitement. In the course of his speech, upon taking the chair, which was a quite lengthy review of the progress of the Republican party, Mr. Hoar said: There are still States in the South where honest elections are unknown. But the accession of the great Commonwealth of Virginia to the ranks of the States who, in the language of her gallant leader, mean hereafter to have every ballot freely east and fairly counted; to provide education at public cost for all their people, and to obliterate race distinction from politics, has broken, I trust, forever, the ranks of the solid South, There are some things in the attitude of the party now dominant in Virginia that I wish were otherwise. I believe they will be otherwise under the influence of new associations and the demands of an enlightened self-interest. But the face of Virginia is toward the morning of the emancipation of the greatest of the States of the South from the fetters of bourbon rule, which is, in the 15th amendment. On an informal ballot Robert R. Bishop was nominated for Governor, the vote standing -Bishop, 673; Crapo, 504. This vote was afterward declared formal, and Bishop's nomination was then made unani-

Our Fair, and What is It?

MR. "Yes, but I heard one of possible to erect suitable buildings for the ladies and our farming friends to exhibit their handiwork and farm products this seathere was considerable applause and son. We promise, however, at our next some person in the rear shouted: fair, to be held in the fall of 1882, to provide ample room and liberal premiums in the ladies' department and upon all of the products of > Such was the case last fall, when they could hardly obtain lumber and workmen to inclose the grounds. But why have not suitable buildings been put up this summer, and arrangement made to fulfill the promise made the 'ladies and farmer friends?" For shame such statements should be made and no effort made to carry them out! If it is to be called a Fair and Turf Association let us have more fair than turf, as we need more of the former than latter to improve the masses of the people. For if they intend to make the horse racing the leading feature, why do they not sail under clear colors, and not try to fool the majority of our country by pretending to have a fair.

Hoping some steps will be taken to right the matter, I am respectfully,
THE LADIES' AND FARMERS' FRIEND. Let us hear from others sources in regard to this matter, and we may have a fair yet Another Falsehood Nailed.

Jacksboro, Tenn., September 19. MR. EDITOR: We see, in the weekly Houk, of this date, a letter purporting to come from Campbell County, which is so utterly false that we feel to give it a short notice, that the honest people of other counties may see to what desperate efforts these bosses are being driven. We see but one truth the writer told in the whole thing, and that is that the "Republicans of this county will not be bossed." The writer says: "A majority of the Rule delegates to the convention at Knoxville are now strong Houk men, and will so declare themselves if Houk men, and will so declare themselves if necessary "He knew that was false when he penned it. He must have been suffering from Houk's "pizen." The truth is, if there is a single voter in Campbell County that ever thought of voting for Rule, that is now for Houk, we have never heard of it.

We venture, the man who wrote the letter is either holding some office Houk has se cured for him, or is looking up to him for one. A few mere tools, that is to Houk, as clay in the potter's hands, are responsible for all this trouble in the Republican ranks. they have been represented in the calaboose
